On 7th August 2026, Modern Institute for Education, Modern School Barakhamba Road, conducted a workshop in collaboration with Department of Education, Gargi College, University of Delhi. it was organised under the MoU signed between two institutions.

Session flow

The workshop explored the Yamuna as Delhi's lifeline and how river learning can become part of everyday school teaching. The programme included:

1. An introduction to the Yamuna River Initiative (YaRI) and the screening of the YaRI documentary.
2. A postcard writing activity where participants have to write their feelings towards Yamuna in 22 words.
3. Zikr-E-Yamuna, a session on understanding the Yamuna as Delhi's lifeline
4. A water memory writing activity
5. Rivers through literature and music
6. Integrating river consciousness into teaching and learning
7. Subject specific research project ideation

The workshop was an initiation into the MoU between Gargi College and Modern Institute for Education, Modern School, Barakhamba Road. It gave future teachers a hands-on introduction to river education, moving from personal reflection and writing to practical ideas for their own subject and classrooms.

Way forward

Student teacher will integrate this into their lesson plans and conduct research projects on the themes aligned with their chosen subject. The research and reflections may be developed into full fledged research Papers.
